

OCEAN OF REGRET

(Neil Murray)

Are you travellin' tonight, alone on a flight
Do you stare out there, at a world below?
Are you lost and confused
Do ya feel that you've made a wrong move
Somewhere, somehow back in the past
You were mistaken?
Does your heart cry out now
For the words that you never found
At the right time and place together?

Tell me why is it so, that I can now let you go
When my life here alone is so thin?
I'll just stand on this ground
For it's all that I know how
If the truth can come out, you will land safely

Look back on the days, I remember them well
There's me and you, we were under a spell
How we laughed, how we sang
How we cried, how we danced
Did our hearts beat too fast together?

Now, this lady I talk to
I hope that she stays
But then light must fall
Mist has to fray

Tell me why is it so, that I can now let you go
When my life here alone is so thin?
I'll just stand on this ground
For it's all that I know how
If the truth can come out, you will land safely
But if there's no fruit to our lives
Then we must say good-bye
For it's better to grow apart than grow bitter
On an ocean of regret

Tell me why is it so, that I can now let you go
When my life here alone is so thin?
I'll just stand on this ground
For it's all that I know how
If the truth can come out, you will land safely
But if there's no fruit to our lives
Then we must say good-bye
For it's better to grow apart than grow bitter
On an ocean of regret
